

ICCM 1008 Leading Teams and Collaboration

An innovative hybrid online course including a live (in-person or zoom webinar) conference workshop offered by ISODC, Nexus4Change, ICCM, and iCAL. This course combines the best of online, onsite, and video conference formats.

This course begins with a two-hour session at the ISODC Information Exchange on May 19 (3-5 pm Eastern Time) with a concurrent Zoom webinar permitting either on site or online live participation.

ICCM 1008 Leading Teams and Collaboration

This course is designed for current and future executives, consultants, educators, students, and other professionals who wish to develop their knowledge and leadership skills when working with onsite, and virtual teams. It provides perspectives and methods for developing teams and collaborative approaches for our culturally diverse global community. Applications and cases involving teams and collaboration are analyzed and discussed. Participants will learn how to understand, develop, assess, and manage teams.

Participants will attend the May 19 (3-5 pm Eastern Time) session either on site at the ISODC Information Exchange or via the concurrent live Zoom webinar session. Following May 19, participants will complete the course by engaging in a virtual team via the online course site and weekly zoom sessions.

Faculty for ICCM 1008 Teams and Collaboration

Roland Livingston, EdD (facilitator) is an organization development consultant and educator. His work focuses primarily in the areas of leadership, executive coaching, team effectiveness, diversity, and management development processes and services. He has worked extensively in executive coaching, leadership and organizational effectiveness, diversity management, and team building and has provided training and organization development consultation in the United States, Europe, Asia, and the Caribbean. He has provided executive coaching for key leaders in for-profit and non-profit environments.

Jerry Glover, PhD (facilitator) is an author, consultant, and educator whose work has focused on reconciling cultural differences in economic, community, and organizational development. His work has involved extensive onsite and virtual team development and management. He has advised leaders in culture and change initiatives in 30 nations. His most recent book, Transcultural Competence: Navigating Cultural Differences in the Global Community includes an approach to understanding how to create solutions for problems of organizational culture.

For More Information and Registration

For more information or to begin the registration process, contact iCAL Certificate in Cultural Competence Director Suzanne Sterling at suzanne@culturalovertures.ca.

Important Dates

April 3:	Registration open
May 15:	Course site open
May 19:	Onsite/Webinar session at ISODC meetings and Zoom webinar (3-5 pm Eastern Time)
May 26:	Zoom session for coaching virtual teams
June 5:	Zoom session for virtual team meetings
June 12:	Zoom session for virtual team reports, course wrap-up, awards of CE credits

Continuing Education Credits

are awarded by FIT, HRCI, and SHRM for completing ICCM 1008

